Hooking up via Facebook, bullying on a blog, using a cell phone as a tracking device? Clearly, being a teenager isn't the same as it used to be. Wondering what is really going on with teens and the Web? Cyberspace is a brave new world, and how can you find out the best ways to deal with it as your kids take their lives and interests into the online landscape?

Anastasia Goodstein gets it, fully understanding the power of the Internet and how the younger users are using this tool to network, connect, and speak their mind. As an expert on tweens to twenty somethings, she is an award-winning blogger and the founder of YPulse, an independent blog for teen/youth media and marketing professionals. She has been featured in several leading publications including USA Today, Business Week and Forbes. She speaks the language about teens and technology that both parents and young people can understand.

As best selling author of Totally Wired: What Teens and Tweens are Really Doing Online, she offers an inside guide to what teens are really doing on the Internet and with technology. Opening up a window into their hyperconnected digital world,

Goodstein provides fresh insight into blogging, social networking, cyber-bullying, and other topics that will help parents, as well as the rest of the world, find a way to understand, as well as connect, to their kids and as they help navigate this new social medium.

Parents will learn:

- In easy to understand terms, what teens are really doing online-the benefits and the drawbacks of this use
- How to understand and reach "Totally Wired" Teens
- How to promote internet safety.

Reaching today's teens means understanding the role technology plays in their wired lives. From social networking to virtual worlds and cell phones Goodstein will offer insight into how teens are using technology and more importantly how to reach them in ways that are authentic and meaningful.

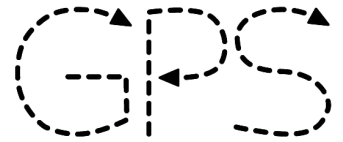

This program is a must- attend for parents of teenagers. Students are welcome to attend as well.
